$1000 AUTO CONTEST CLOSES WITH OVER A MILLION VOTES

WINS

HOME OF THE KOHALA CLUB, THE POPULAR HAWAII

THE automobile belongs to the Kohala Club. The bill of sale was turned over to the local representative of the Club this morning. Chief Charles M. Thurston of the fire department stands second on the list and takes the Angelus piano player. Hanawaki Kruger comes in third and the gun is his. Kelle, the mail-carrier, standing fourth on the list, secures the photographer's outfit. Chun

Y. Tim lands the set of carpenter's tools—and Hon. W. J. Sheldon, Representative to the Legislature from the Garden Island, is the happy possessor of the barrel of flour. The official count in the great automobile contest that has been successfully carried on by the Bulletin took place last evening with the result given. It was a strenuous task and the committeemen were thankful that the vote was not so close that a recount was required. Any man who has ever gone through the effort of counting over a million ballots knows the reason why.

The program started in with a dinner at the Union Grill to the committee which was to do the work of the evening. Lycurgus was told to prepare the best dinner to be found in town, with all the fixin', and he did as he was requested. The dinner was perfectly served from the first course to the last—champagne, coffee, and cigars. The committee sat down to the dinner at a few minutes after six and rose about 8 o'clock at the urgent solicitation of Hanawaki Kruger, who came in to take black coffee and talk it over. He was willing to wager his automobile cap that he would not win the first prize, but he felt sure he would get a ride in it, and therefore wanted to know how the count stood. Following was the menu:

Returning to the Bulletin office, the committee quickly got down to business, surrounded by a crowd of interested spectators. Formal organization was made with Hon. H. L. Holstein as chairman, Jess Woods and John F. Soper as tellers, W. T. Lucas and O. Hillefeld counters. The first thing to be settled was whether the committee should re-count the ballots that had been counted from week to week and published in the Bulletin. These ballots reposed in two big bags and looked formidable—like an all-night job. The ballots in the box were those that had been cast since the last count published in the Bulletin of March 15th.

After some discussion in which the sentiment of the contestants and their representatives present was canvassed, it was formally voted by the committee that the ballots in the box be counted first and the previous vote published by the Bulletin would be accepted unless the margin between two contestants was one hundred, or less, votes.

Having thus reached a basis, the work began. Admiral Beckley, who brought down something like a hundred thousand votes for the Kohala Club by the last Kinau, sat quietly alongside the counters and watched the progress of the work with a satisfaction born of a confidence that he didn't have to talk to keep up his courage. Someone remarked that when the Admiral takes hold of anything it usually goes his way. Kruger wasn't so sure about that. The Admiral shifted his cigar and said all he wanted to know was the margin by which his Kohala friends would win. His awe root had never failed him yet and it wouldn't in this instance because Hawaii never takes second place when the Admiral is in the game. J. G. Rothwell of W. C. Peacock & Co. also had a kindly oversight of the interests of Kohala, he having handled a good-sized bunch of votes that came down from Kohala early in the contest.

Kelle was there and Deering looked after the interests of Charlie Thurston. The count went forward without any difficulties. The ballots were all clearly marked and no vexed questions arose to worry the contestants or the counters. As the votes came out and were tallied off it was soon apparent that the Kohala Club was in the lead and Admiral Beckley puffed his cigar contentedly while Rothwell checked off the figures. Deering suggested that Thurston really had the popular vote and would be satisfied

THE COMMITTEE REPORT

HONOLULU, T. H., March 27, 1905.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

We, the undersigned, a committee appointed to count the votes cast in the Bulletin Prize Contest, hereby certify that the number of votes set forth against the following six names is a true and correct count of the number of votes cast, entitling them to the six prizes offered:

Kohala Club	455,120
C. H. Thurston	309,199
Frank Kruger	112,220
W. Kelle	74,994
Chun Y. Tim	48,372
Wm. J. Sheldon	33,590

with the Angelus. Kruger spoke for expense account which the Bulletin one hundred rounds of ammunition checks up being in the vicinity of from Jess Woods, and Kelle asked the $1,000. The contest has attracted enthusiasm from one end of the Territory to the other. Many telephone calls were answered last evening and wireless messages were sent out to all the islands this morning in response to queries from the other outside districts.

About 10 o'clock the tellers began to check up their figures on the ballots taken from the ballot box. They found that the Kohala Club had cast during the interval from March 15th to March 27th 344,894 votes, giving the club a total of 445,120. Thurston had cast 233,656 votes, giving him a total of 309,199. The others ran along with smaller figures, Sheldon's friends having cast over 5,000 votes for him during the interval.

As the margin between the contestants was not less than one hundred the committee was not required to recount the votes that had already been counted and the figures published in the Bulletin.

The total number of votes cast in the contest amounted to a million and ninety-five thousand, showing that the interest had been widespread and the friends of those especially interested very active in their behalf. The contestants were a unit in their favorable comment as to the fair methods by which the Bulletin conducted the contest and while it was the biggest thing of its kind that has ever been carried out in Hawaii it was voted also the best, and very appropriate to the best newspaper in town.

Never before in the history of the islands has any newspaper offered such valuable and useful prizes, the

PETREL BRINGS CREW OF WRECKED SCHOONER KENNEDY FROM LAYSAN

Bringing the captain and crew of the ill-fated schooner C. Kennedy, wrecked on Laysan Island on the afternoon of March 3, the gunboat Petrel came into the harbor this morning and tied up at the Naval dock at 8:45. With the coming of the Petrel the mystery of the C. Kennedy's sudden and strange disappearance is cleared up, and one more wreck laid to the account of storm and reef on Laysan Island.

The Petrel brings the entire crew, not a man being lost—a fine record. Captain Max Schlemmer, Mate Chas. Krohn, and Second Mate Joseph A. Green are the white men brought from their anxious watch by their signal of distress on the lonely southwest coast. The crew, consisting of seven Japanese, accompanied them here.

Although the schooner is a total loss, battered and crushed beyond hope of repair, most of the cargo was saved by hard effort. All the mail was saved with the exception of some loose letters and papers from Honolulu and the Islands. The cargo consisted principally of Government stores and supplies for the cable station. The Petrel brought the recovered cargo back to Honolulu.

The wrecked schooner was seen by the Petrel as the latter went down. Take advantage of the great reduction sale in shoes at L. B. Kerr & Co.'s.

SCHLEMMER'S STORY

The captain of the wrecked schooner C. Kennedy told his story to a Bulletin reporter this morning. Captain Schlemmer plainly shows the effects of the hardships of the wreck and the subsequent watch for some vessel to take him and his crew from their lonely vigil beside the torn and bruised bulk with the signal of distress flying above their heads. Captain Schlemmer looks like a man who has lost a loved friend, and as he told his story he did not like to speak of the details of the experience.

"There isn't much to it," said Captain Schlemmer. "We went ashore—piled up on the reef—that's all. Yes. (Continued on Page 3.)
